Revision that works with your brain

For GCSEs, Nat 5s, Highers, A-levels or uni exams. Short sessions, clear plans, lots of ticking off, and techniques that actually help things stick.

HOW TO USE IT

1. Fill in your exam timetable and subjects.
2. Break each subject into topics on a topic tracker (red, amber, green).
3. Plan each week on the weekly timetable, starting with red topics.
4. Use short focus sessions and active techniques.
5. Look after yourself. Sleep is revision too!

ADHD-FRIENDLY BY DESIGN

- [ ] Short 20–25 minute sessions
- [ ] Lots to tick and colour in
- [ ] Variety: mix subjects and techniques
- [ ] Body doubling and reward ideas
- [ ] A "stuck" page for frozen days
- [ ] Undated: start whenever you're ready

TECHNIQUES

Revision techniques that work

Re-reading notes feels productive but doesn't help much. These active techniques make your brain work, so things stick.

Active recall

Close the book and test yourself. What can you remember? Then check and fill the gaps.

Spaced practice

Revisit topics after a day, a few days, then a week. Little and often beats cramming.

Past papers

Practise real exam questions, then mark them with the mark scheme. Notice the patterns.

Blurting

Write everything you know about a topic on a blank page in five minutes, then check what you missed.

Flashcards

Question on the front, answer on the back. Sort into "know it" and "not yet" piles.

Teach it

Explain a topic out loud to someone (or your pet!). If you can teach it, you know it.

Mind maps

Put the topic in the middle and branch out. Great for seeing how ideas connect.

Mix it up

Switching between topics (interleaving) feels harder but helps you remember more.

NOTES

FOCUS

Focus tools for busy brains

Starting is often the hardest part. Try these.

Short sessions

Work for 20–25 minutes, then take a 5-minute break. After four, take a longer break.

Phone away

Put your phone in another room, or use a focus app or timer lock.

Body doubling

Revise alongside someone else, in person or on a video call. "Study with me" videos work too.

Make it physical

Walk while you test yourself, use coloured pens, or stand at a counter.

Tiny first step

Not "revise biology". Just "open the textbook to page 42".

Reward yourself

A snack, a walk, an episode. Pair rewards with finishing sessions.

NOTES

Blurting page

Write everything you remember. No notes! Then check and add what you missed in a different colour.

KEEP THIS HANDY

Stuck? Start here

For the days you can't make yourself start.

Breathe	Three slow breaths. You're not lazy, starting is just hard.
↓
Body check	Water, food, fresh air, loo. Fix one.
↓
Pick one topic	The smallest, easiest one is fine.
↓
Tiny step	Just open the book or the past paper.
↓
Ten-minute timer	Go. Stop when it rings if you want.
↓
Tick it off	Colour in a box. Every session counts.

WELLBEING

Looking after me

Your brain works best when you look after the rest of you.

DAILY BASICS

- [ ] 8–10 hours sleep (teens need lots!)
- [ ] Breakfast and regular meals
- [ ] Water bottle on the desk
- [ ] Some movement or fresh air
- [ ] Time with friends or family
- [ ] Screen-free wind-down before bed

WHEN IT ALL FEELS TOO MUCH

- [ ] Take a proper break
- [ ] Talk to someone you trust
- [ ] Tell a teacher or tutor
- [ ] Break the plan into smaller pieces
- [ ] Remember: exams aren't everything
