FOR GROWN-UPS

Picture routines that help kids feel calm

Lots of children, especially those with ADHD or autism, find routines easier when they can see them. Pictures make each step clear, reduce nagging and help kids feel proud and independent.

HOW TO USE THEM

1. Print on card if you can, and laminate for wipe-clean use.
2. Choose a ready-made routine chart, or build your own with the picture cards and a blank strip.
3. Cut out the cards and use Velcro dots or Blu Tack so they can be moved.
4. Keep routines short: 4–8 steps is plenty.
5. Praise effort, not perfection.

INSIDE

- [ ] Morning, after school, bedtime and weekend charts
- [ ] First / Then board
- [ ] Build-your-own schedule strips
- [ ] 96 picture cards (+ blanks to draw your own)
- [ ] Feelings chart and calm-down choices
- [ ] Reward chart and chore chart

Every child is different. If your child has additional needs, their school, health visitor or occupational therapist may have ideas for adapting these.
